Questions submitted by parents to be addressed: answers in red

Why isn't there a focus on serving food with less sugar content? Even if it meets the standards, it's still not healthy. For instance, a churro for breakfast. "Healthy" means different things to different people. More scratch cooking. Pushing more veggies in the morning. Cereals Manufactured just for RVUSD

How do parents get information on the second chance breakfast or snacks being provided? There is no menu available. Menus & nutritional info found on RVUSD.org

How do parents opt out of second chance breakfast and snacks? Kids cannot get two snacks

Will the meals change after the universal school meal funding sunsets? Hopefully not

How has extended care been able to introduce healthy foods this year, but not the standard offerings at the school? Daycare snacks are privately funded. Nutritional requirements only exist 8-3:00

How do parents find information on the nutrition standards that is easy to understand? The federal standards are very confusing and it's hard to verify if meals meet these standards as a parent.

Even if meals meet the federal standards, how can we establish a different standard for RVUSD? What is the standard you are trying to reach? What direction do we want to go?

Have you considered doing a survey to determine how parents feel about the food choices? Upcoming, by school

How can parents get more involved or learn more about your work? Talking to the cook in the morning can provide more information on a daily basis.

How can we do better? Volunteers in the kitchen? Hire more help?

Principal Harvell's message:

- Camp Binkley was a success. New murals going up.

- PBIS Teachers/staff/parents. Focus on expectations. Super jars earns rewards for classes. Educlimber tracking behavior shares challenging time for students with incidents. Brainstorming snack times in the class to keep bellies full.
- AAA safety patrol. 6th grade students crossing guards after school. Adding morning shift later on.
- Great california shake out 10/17
- End of trimester & conferences coming up
- Spanish speaking parents club. Dia de los muertos 11/2 tree of life in the MPR and ofrenda
